ORANGE AND BLUE TO TACKLE VANDERBILT

Final Arrangements Completed for Football Contest Between These Two Elevens-November 9 Is Tentative D te Decided Upon. Nashvi le to Be Seat of Conflict.

Charlottesville, Va., January 7.—
After negotiations that have lasted over several years, it is now an assured fact that the University of Virginia and Vanderbilt football elevens will clash for the first time in many years next fall. November 2 has practically been decided on for the date, the game to be played on the Vanderbilt stounds in Nashville, Tenn. The following year, according to plans which have only to be approved by the board of faculty advisers, the teams will clash somewhere in this vicinity, probably on Lambeth Field. With Vanderbilt in line, it is practically certain that one of the three big games that have been features on the schedule for the place on Virginia's schedule cannot be determined at this time, but the place on Virginia's schedule cannot be determined at this time, but the consensus here seems to be that Johns Hopkins or Swarthmore will lose the place on Virginia's schedule cannot be determined at this time, but the consensus here seems to be that Johns Hopkins or Swarthmore will lose the place on Virginia's schedule cannot be determined at this time, but the consensus here seems to be that Johns Hopkins will be the leser. The Baltimoreans falled to show anything like winning dorm in the game last fall, and are therefore not looked upon as a real contender. Lannigan has named his terms to the officials here, and frankly admitted that he would consider a change should they fall to accede to the small increase that he has asked for.

Those who appreciate what the veteran coach has done for the university will no doubt do all in their power to bring about his retention. Only a few on the inside realize just how much he has accomplished since his advent some years ago. Not only has he turned out one championship track team after the other with such stars as Jimmy Rector, Larry Martin and Forrest Stantes in the ranks, but his services to the football and baseball teams have been indispensable.
